

Profile

Tagore was born on 7th October 1968, in GOA - INDIA. He grew up in lovely GOA and when he was 15 left for overseas. Tagore spent 9 years in the United Kingdom perusing his higher education in Computer Studies. During this time, Tagore also did various courses in filmmaking, over the weekends, at the Film Makers co-op, in Camden Town, London.

Tagore's heart and soul live in a group called 'The Uncultured Company (<http://www.theunculturedcompany.com>) that he founded in the early 90s, while still in the UK, however the group lived within Tagore's soul while he was merely a schoolboy in GOA. The goal of the group is to help bridge the gap between people. Not necessarily on an intellect level or for that matter, not even on a cultural level. This is on a level of humanity, a level of bonding our souls, our hearts and our love. It's also about tolerance and acceptance, so that these can then open the doors for love and peace to flow freely within us all.

His work (verses) can be read on-line <http://www.goacom.org/tagore>. Years ago, Tagore put together 50 of his poems in a form of a book and printed 100 copies of the book. He sent by courier the book to 100 people across the world. People who had inspired him or merely entertained him as he grew up. Right from Japanese composer Kitaro to Steven Spielberg to a few individuals from India. Some wrote back, some called to thank home, while some never bothered. Since then Tagore has been writing poetry, street verses, as he prefers to call them. His work ranges from rebelling out against the system, to his humanitarian cry, to love ballads and last but not least, reflecting his immense sense of spirituality and relationship with the creator. He currently has 12 books of verses on the net that are available for people to read. Should anyone want to use one of these poems, all they need to do is contact Tagore. His work can also be downloaded from the www.tagorealmeida.com web site.

Besides poetry Tagore writes scripts for films, one of which has been made into a commercial Telugu film. In the midst of the peak of his carrier, Tagore decided to chuck it all in and write his first film. Living with his wonderful folks in GOA, Tagore would write daily from around 10pm to 7am and he did this for around 3 months. Script in hand and with absolutely no idea on how to sell it, or contact in Bollywood, Tagore set of to Mumbai and started knocking on doors. Strangely, the day he landed in Mumbai, Tagore did not have a single address of any film director or producer. Several false leads later, Tagore tied up with someone he only refers to as 'the-offbeat-producer' Mr. Pravesh Sippy. Months of re-writes (read as 'lets take your original film concept and Bollywood-ize it), the film was sold. One of the leading Film & Television houses in India, NIMBUS COMMUNICATIONS purchased the film, translated it into Telugu, produced the film and got it directed by none other than Suresh Krishna, one of South India's most respected and well renowned film directors. His second script, tentatively titled 'A World Beyond' is ready. He has also written the screenplay for another film, being directed by a friend, and has just started writing his third commercial film 'Legacy'.

Tagore has The Uncultured Company website (www.theunculturedcompany.com), wherein he hopes to promote his message of secularism in the world. Tagore has been on local radio stations in Dubai (Dubai Eye & Radio 4 FM). He has also been written about on the Afternoon paper (Mumbai), Maharashtra Times (Mumbai), Times of India and other newspapers and magazines in GOA, besides a few websites. Tagore is constantly looking for people/organizations to work with him on his various projects and to work with them on their projects. Folk who understand the fact that we are all one, and people who are longing to spread love and peace. Tagore wants to connect with this group of people who he can share his peace group with. To tell them about the group, the future projects hoping that these people will be touched and then go ahead and touch the lives of the people that they meet.

Believe it or not, this is just about one coming with their human soul and possibly being a part of a unconventional, an Uncultured group that represents nothing but just awaking within people the humanity that they have perhaps forgotten. Love, peace and tolerance, to all of us. We are angels, know that, and we can make the difference for the betterment of the world, for us, everyone and above all for our children. So please do come, and perhaps you can help us reach out to more people. Be a part of our one day peace show, our quarterly online magazine, our new BLOG of hope, our films, our music, our dreams of smiles project. Come be a part of it all. You could be a doctor, lawyer, journalist, musician, actor etc, come coz first of all, you are a human being - a creation of the coolest creator ever.
